

LOCAL CIVIC SERVICE ORGANIZATION HAS
ANNUAL ELECTION

At the luncheon meeting of the members of the Daly City Lions Club last Monday, new officers were chosen for the coming term, who will endeavor to speed up the work of this civic service association, in an effort to eclipse even the good record of the retiring officers.

The new officers are: Ernest Micco, president; William Ottoboni, vice-president; Otto Schramm, secretary; W. J. Lanthau, treasurer. The directors will be Messrs. A. Vireno, W. M. McGregor, R. A. Canine and W. J. Lanthau.

The newly elected officers are to be formally installed at the next luncheon meeting, to be held next Monday at the Colonial restaurant. All members are expected to be in attendance, it being anticipated that there will be a number of important projects to be launched at this meeting.

The local Lions Club, which is affiliated with the national organization which has service clubs in nearly every wide-awake city and town in the United States, has for its main excuse for existence, service to every laudable and progressive enterprise. In a majority of the towns in which a Lions Club functions, it takes the lead in most of the civic improvements and in securing aid for deserving institutions, and Daly City should be proud of its little band of business and professional men who are endeavoring to make a bigger and better Daly City, and should give them every encouragement. While the membership roll is small at present, it is hoped that in the near future it may be augmented to include a goodly number of progressive and consistent boosters for this community, who will work at all time for the advancement of this community.

DALY CITY TEAM
AGAIN VICTORIOUS

Stroud and Joe Drucker were the outstanding stars of the game.

Don't forget, you Daly City fans, that the boys play every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 on the Jefferson Union high school grounds.

WOODMAN CIRCLE HOLD
DISTRICT CONVENTION

Supreme Forest Woodman Circle, Grove No. 6, had the honor of holding its first district convention in Redman Hall. The decorations were very beautiful, with many bright colored flowers and foliage. The officers, members and deputies in attendance represented the following Groves in the state of California: Laprimavera Grove No. 3, Sacramento; Pine Grove No. 9, Portola; Orange Blossom Grove No. 12, Oroville; Alcazar Grove No. 5, Oakland. Plans and ideals were exemplified in a very pleasing manner by the State Manager, Mrs. Bessie Rehberg. The drill team put on excellent work. Salome Walrath, captain of Drill Team No. 6, with her team formed the letters of Mrs. Bessie Rehberg's name, singing at the same time "Bessie Rehberg, how we love you." Many beautiful gifts and bouquets and baskets of lovely flowers were showered upon Mrs. Bessie Rehberg. At 12 p. m., all retired to the banquet hall, where refreshments were served.

Ernest Micco, retiring president of the parlor, presided and thanked all the members for their support.

Andrew Murphy was chosen in the election of officers to guide El Carmelo in her next six months of progress. Other officers chosen were as follows: First Vice-President, Charles Farmar; Second Vice-President, Snow Lorenzo; Third Vice-President, Charles Bozagno; Marshal, Walter L. Murphy; Inside Sentinel, Leonard Mohr; Outside Sentinel, Ed Ellison.

Several new members were initiated at the meeting and they, with the other members, enjoyed light refreshments after the meeting.

Prof. W. J. Savage gave a very interesting and inspiring address and added to the success of the evening.

BEAUTIFUL HOME WEDDING
UNITES POPULAR COUPLE

On Saturday evening, June 30, at 7:30 o'clock, Miss Beatrice Roberts Landini, daughter of Constable and Mrs. S. A. Landini, became the bride of James Arthur Gillies, of San Francisco, at the family home on Winchester street, Daly City. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. S. Kelly, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of South San Francisco.

The groom is the son of Martha Gillies and the late John Gillies of San Francisco, and a nephew of James Gillies, general manager of the Canadian Pacific Steamship Company.

The entire house was profusely decorated with greens and flowers. The dining room was a bower of pink roses and fern and the bridal party stood under a cluster of wedding bells and between huge baskets of roses six feet high. Miss Daisy Gowland played the wedding march, which was led by the bridesmaids, Miss Florence Gillies and Miss Gladys Gillies, sisters of the groom. The bride entered on the arm of her father. The groom was attended by Wendal Stuart. The bride was dressed in white satin and her bouquet was gardenias and lilies of the valley, with white tulle streamers. The maid of honor wore orchid and pink taffeta and carried orchid pamsies with pink roses. The bridesmaid wore yellow taffeta and carried yellow pansies with orchid candy tuft with streamers of silver ribbon.

There were about fifty guests. Mrs. A. Gowland rendered several beautiful solos. Miss Leona Gillbrech caught the bridal bouquet. A buffet supper was served to the many guests present. Most of the evening was spent in congratulating the young couple and viewing the many beautiful gifts received by the bride. The presents filled two rooms and are still coming in from those out of town who were unable to be present. Miss Landini was the incentive of several beautiful showers both in San Francisco and Daly City.

During their honeymoon the young couple will visit at the summer home of Attorney Limpert of Burlingame, at Lake Tahoe. They will reside later in Daly City in their own home.

DALY CITY METHODIST CHURCH

The pastor will return from his vacation this week, and will preach Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. Make it a point to be present. Let us try to fill the church. It can be done, if each one will do their bit.

The following poem appeared in the California Christian Advocate, written by John E. Charton, entitled "The Master's Way."

Oh, Master, I would be like Thee
In trust that is humility,
And know the power that comes from God,
By following where Thy feet have trod.
To have the trust that makes me take Unpleasant paths for Thy dear sake;
To do the Father's will for me
And thus to follow after Thee.
To go when Thou dost point the way.
Or harder still, just waiting, stay;
To love, to work, my cross to bear,
Thy suffering and Thy triumph share.
Oh, Master, just to be like Thee
In winsome, virile pursuits;
Strong, Son of God, may I be strong
In doing good, forgiving wrong.
So let me follow after Thee,
It may be to Gethsemane,
To suffer, pray, and conquer still,
Because I do my Father's will.

INCREASE IN FLIGHTS
AT MILLS AIRPORT

The continuous upward swing in air transportation traffic that is booming commercial aviation is reflected in a marked degree in the June report of business at San Francisco's municipally owned airport, at Mills Field.

The June report, just made public, shows 1,298 flights and landings to and from all parts of America, with a total of 2,203 passengers, showing a substantial gain over May. Since the establishment of Mills Field fourteen months ago, business has increased steadily, with an aggregate of 10,646 flights and landings and 16,667 passengers.

Mills Field is buzzing with activity twenty-four hours each day, and is handling a capacity business, with its modern equipment being constantly expanded to meet the increasing demands for space and service. With several transportation companies operating planes from Mills Field in all directions, landing and loading scores of passengers daily; with six flying schools, training hundreds of student pilots, and several airplane factory agencies located there, Mills Field, called "America's Model Airport," has become a thriving Western terminal for America's air lanes.

Supervisor Milo F. Kent, chairman of the city's airport committee, proved his faith in air transportation by embarking on his June honeymoon in a Maddux line plane that flew him and his bride, formerly Miss Margaret Eichhoff, to Los Angeles in high spirits.

ANOTHER ROAD FROM COLMA TO SAN BRUNO

Plans for the extension of Junipero Serra boulevard from Colma to San Bruno, where it will connect with El Camino Real, were tentatively agreed upon last Monday in San Francisco at a meeting of San Mateo and San Francisco representatives. If the apportionment cost can be agreed upon, the matter will be presented next Monday to the San Francisco supervisors for adoption, it was stated by Supervisor Andrew J. Gallagher, the chairman of the district board.

The new boulevard, to extend south from School street, in Colma, a distance of nine miles and running west of Lawndale, will cost $2,100,000, and is among the most important road projects in Northern California at the present time, representatives at the conference were told by the engineers.

The boulevard extension will have a 125-foot right of way, with a macadam roadway 70 feet wide. It runs in a direct line south from Junipero Serra boulevard and school street back of the cemeteries. Two branches to connect with the Peninsula highway are provided.

This highway is planned for ultimate extension to Santa Clara county, following a route west of Stanford University.

CITY ATTORNEY TAKEN ILL
WHILE ON VACATION TRIP

The many friends of City Attorney J. E. McCurdy were shocked to receive news from Mrs. McCurdy that he is confined to the Skagway, Alaska, hospital, seriously ill. Mr. and Mrs. McCurdy, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Mariannetti, left last week on a vacation trip to Alaska. Before his departure, friends said, Mr. McCurdy complained that he was not feeling well. Two months ago he suffered an attack of influenza, and was threatened with pneumonia, but had apparently completely recovered before his departure for the north.

COUNTY VALUATION
SET AT $50,000,000

The assessed valuation of San Mateo county for the year 1928 is $50,000,000, according to a tentative report submitted to the board of supervisors by County Assessor D. P. Flynn.

The actual figures of the report are $49,381,930, but the fifty million mark will be reached in the final report, according to Assessor Flynn, after additions have been made to the personal property item from additional payments and assessments being made by his office.

The total assessment figures for last year at this date were $47,386,200, or almost $2,000,000 less than the 1928 assessment. On the basis of a tax rate of $2.98, it means that the available revenues for county purposes, should the board of supervisors decide to levy at the same rate, would be well over $50,000.

The new assessment shows an increase this year in all of the cities of the county and in the Second, Fourth and Fifth townships. The First and Third townships show losses in assessed valuation, but this is due to the fact that parts of these townships have been added to cities.

Hillsborough continues as first on the list of assessed valuation, but San Mateo has passed Burlingame, due to the addition of Baywood and Homestead during the past year.

The figures in detail are as follows:

Valuation of County, 1928
South San Francisco	$ 2,540,670
Lawndale	332,450
Daly City	1,437,465
San Bruno	1,203,435
Hillsborough	5,742,650
Menlo Park	815,925
Atherton	2,511,915
Burlingame	5,421,935
San Mateo	5,575,405
San Carlos	318,530
Redwood City	3,267,845

Total value of cities...$29,663,225

Valuation by Townships
First township	$ 5,174,695
Second township	2,690,615
Third township	6,475,745
Fourth township	1,789,650
Fifth township	1,072,600

Total value townships...$17,203,305
Total value of county...$46,866,530
Operative roll...2,515,400

Grand total...$49,381,930

The report was referred to the county auditor and will be used as a basis in estimating the proposed expenditure and tax levy for the year.

FORMER SAN BRUNO CLERK
CHARGED WITH SHORTAGE

The city of San Bruno has filed suit in the Superior Court against Nettie Willets, former city clerk, for the recovery of $2,759, alleged to have been misappropriated during her tenure of office. In connection with this suit, City Attorney Rapsey was also given authority to sue the company in which Miss Willets was bonded. The suit is a closing gesture in a long investigation of Miss Willets' accounts and the subsequent finding of a shortage said to represent the amount above named.

ROCKAWAY BEACH TO HAVE STREET LIGHTING SYSTEM

The Rockaway Beach street lighting district, recently organized, last week awarded its lighting contract to the Great Western Power Company for a period of four years, and the company now has a crew at work installing the lighting system. It is expected that the work will be completed shortly. The citizens of Salada Beach are also considering a like forward stride in the march of progress.

BOARD ADOPTS LAW FOR REGULATION OF
PLANES AND PILOTS

Under a county ordinance adopted last Monday by the board of supervisors at Redwood City, unlicensed aviators who land their planes anywhere in San Mateo county will find themselves unable to take off again until they have secured a license. The ordinance will become effective within thirty days.

The same regulations will apply to planes, all of which must bear a certificate from the United States Department of Commerce before they can be taken into the air from any point within the county. The certificate must attest the air worthiness of the craft under specifications laid down by the department and enforced by E. E. Mouton, inspector for this district.

District Attorney Franklin Swart, in presenting the ordinance to the board, observed that San Mateo county is "rapidly becoming an air center," and that the new law is necessary for the protection of passengers who patronize San Mateo county airports.

The ordinance, designed by the Department of Commerce, has already been adopted in Los Angeles and Alameda counties, where large airports are located. It gives federal and county officials the right to enforce safety regulations outside the boundaries of regularly licensed ports, which are under government supervision.

The new ordinance was presented to the board two weeks ago by Superintendent Frank Flynn of Mills Field, and was taken under advisement to await the report of District Attorney Swart, who last Monday recommended its adoption.

The supervisors also approved a tax levy for the San Mateo high school and junior college district to provide for the $150,000 high school bond issue and the raising of $30,000 for the college under a special tax.

A budget for the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce, calling for $13,500 was taken under advisement by the board. The budget calls for an increase of $5,100 over that of last year.

SPEED URGED IN BUILDING OF COASTSIDE SCENIC ROAD

Urging that San Mateo county proceed at once with a survey for the proposed new road around the summit of San Pedro mountain, so that the vegetable growing industry of the county may have better transportation facilities to markets in San Francisco, State Senator M. B. Johnson, of Montara, addressed the county supervisors at Redwood City last Monday.

Supervisor Manuel Francis, of Half Moon Bay, said he had communicated recently with Assistant City Engineer Clyde Healy of San Francisco on the survey under plans of the three counties highway district in charge of construction of the San Francisco-Santa Cruz $5,000,000 highway, and that Healy charged that San Mateo and Santa Cruz counties were "holding up" the project.

The board promised to call the attention of County Engineer George A. Kneese to the importance of speeding the survey and approved plans presented by Senator Johnson for hastening the work. The tentative survey made by Engineer Kneese is on plans slightly different from those of the three counties district, having been completed before the formation of the joint district.

KEGS OF ALCOHOL COME

Scores of ten-gallon kegs of alcohol were washed ashore just north of Half Moon Bay last Saturday and Sunday, leading to the belief that a rum running vessel had been wrecked, or that the alcohol may have been lost during a battle between members of the crew and hi-jackers. A squad of officers took charge of the kegs as soon as they were discovered, and search for the owners is being made.

REALLY PERFECTING THE ART OF LIVING

If there is any quality which is conspicuously American, it is the ability to increase the comforts of living.

The importance of our industrial age is that creating more prosperity, efficiency and leisure, puts us on a higher plane of life.

This Golden Age of ours is just beginning. As yet, comparatively speaking, we have but skimmed the surface of its possibilities. In less than half a century we have made a magnificent beginning. There is no forecasting the end.

Our great advantage over European countries is that our youth is such a short way behind us. We have no inelastic attitudes of mind, no institutions made unprogressive and unchanging by centuries. Our ways are not dictated by ancestors dead for uncounted generations.

We faced the gigantic duty of developing America, with ability and ingenuity representing the best the ancient world had to offer. And with these, we had a youthful people's qualities of open-mindedness, adventurousness, and an ambition to set up new institutions and trends of thought, better than any that had been before, that we might have a happier, fuller life.

We have aged since then, and maturity has ironed out many of the rough spots. To a great extent we have succeeded in accomplishing our early aims. We have the best paid, happiest working class in the world. We enjoy advantages unknown elsewhere. Our form of government and our institutions are the admiration, and often the model, of nations centuries our elders in years.

Such is our contribution so far to civilization. The arts of living are more generally understood; we have shown the need for many luxuries as well as the bare necessities. Not only our own people, but most of the world has been influenced by this development.

We have done great things. We will do far greater things on a multitude of still dim tomorrows.

Taken for a patient when he called at a hospital to visit his son, James Graham, of London, aged 72, was bathed, shaved and put to bed for the night, despite his protests.

DALY CITY LIONS CLUB

CHILDREN CROSS THE STREETS CARELESSLY

Crossing the street without paying attention to approaching automobiles, and stepping from behind parked cars or other objects, constitute the principal cause of accidents due to carelessness of children, it is claimed. The first cause represents 55 per cent of all accidents involving carelessness of children, and the second 29 per cent.

Playing of children in streets results in 6 per cent of these accidents; coasting, 6 per cent; stealing rides, 2 per cent; confusion, 1 per cent; and boarding or leaving street cars, .04 per cent.

With vacation time at hand, it places an added responsibility on each motorist to take particular care that he does not run down a child. In some cases it may be the child's fault, but a life or a permanent injury is a fearful price to pay for one moment of carelessness.

The automobile driver should operate his machine, so far as he can, in such a way as to avoid accidents, even if children and other pedestrians are using the streets without due regard for their own safety.

THE RETURN of ANTHONY TRENT

By WYNDHAM MARTYN

STORY FROM THE START

Anthony Trent, once master criminal, now reformed, returns to New York after four years' absence. He learns his friend, Capt. Frank Sutton, is in Sing Sing. Trent is surprised to find his New York apartment occupied by a stranger, Campbell Sutton, who represents himself as the brother of Frank Sutton. Trent is asked by Campbell to force a confession from Payson Grant, whom he accuses of having crookedly obtained all of Frank Sutton's property and then married the latter's wife. Trent starts on a campaign to accomplish the downfall of Grant. He learns that Captain Sutton has escaped from Sing Sing and later, to his surprise, finds that Campbell is really Frank Sutton. Trent takes his place in society as the opening gun of his campaign against Grant. He becomes a house guest of the Grants.

"How can I see Miss Dupin?" he demanded.

"She has retired by now, probably," the butler answered. "She has a room above your own, sir, next to the house-keeper."

"I must see her at once," Trent asserted. "Can you tell her Mrs. Grant wants her for a few moments? Shall we say in half an hour?"

"Very good," said Thorpe. "In half an hour I'll bring her past your sitting-room door."

Trent had ten minutes in his room before he could expect the woman who had threatened to expose him. It was not a comfortable ten minutes to live through. More had mentioned a woman named Dupin and classed her with the maids. It was far more likely that it was she who would be the operative from a detective agency. And if she were, what a future of dread would envelop Anthony Trent! His keen ears detected the butler's solid tread almost as the thirtieth minute was dying. A modest knock sounded and the door was opened.

"In here, miss," said Thorpe's voice. The woman who had advanced a few paces into the room looked at the closing door suspiciously.

"This is a trick," she said. Trent rose to his feet and bowed almost gayly. The sight of her had banished his alarms. In Mademoiselle Dupin, Anthony Trent beheld the only person who had tricked and defeated him in all his adventurous life.

He remembered well how he had met her in one of his early enterprises. How vividly there came back to him now the library of the Guestwick home in Fifth avenue, that autumn night now gone by many years. Guestwick, the millionaire patron of the fine arts, had been possessed of a wild and amorous son; this young man had designed to marry a chorus girl named Grandcourt, whose origins, despite her name, were humble.

In order to buy back his son's burning love letters, Newman Guestwick had promised to pay fifty thousand dollars in currency. Anthony Trent had learned that this money was deposited in the Guestwick home overnight pending the interview with the chorus girl next morning. He had entered the house in the guise of a detective and had used authority to send the servants to bed. Not twenty minutes before, he had left the entire Guestwick family at their golden horseshoe box at the Metropolitan opera, where they would remain during a particularly long music drama. Trent had thus two hours in which to search the quiet house for the hiding place he sought.

The money was already in his hands when the woman, who was now Mademoiselle Dupin, came from behind some draperies and surprised him. Never had he beheld so lovely a vision. She was dressed superbly. She had announced herself as one of the Guestwick daughters and only refrained from sending for the police because she thought he would give up his loot and turn to better occupations. She had read him a little lecture on wasted opportunities.

It was when she saw that the burglar in evening dress was laughing at her that these long, jade eyes narrowed in fear. He told her he could afford to laugh because he knew she was not a Guestwick; he assured her he had left the Misses Guestwick at the opera, and none of them were dowered with good looks.

Then the lovely girl had broken down. She confessed her role was a false one. In reality, she was Estelle Grandcourt, of as good a family as the Guestwicks themselves. She had come, surreptitiously, to meet the parents of the man she loved and show them she was not the painted adventuress they supposed her to be. The affair had touched Trent's generous heart. All his sympathies were hers. She pointed out that were he to take the bribe money, they would believe her to be the thief and there could be no reconciliation. With tears in her eyes she had confessed that she had married the wild Guestwick heir and loved him.

So Anthony Trent, with the object

ry of one who had nothing to gain by his sacrifice, replaced the fifty thousand dollars.

Later he discovered how he had been fooled. The girl was neither Guestwick nor Grandcourt. She was one of the most brilliant adventuresses who ever bothered the police of two hemispheres. In "continental Europe they knew her as the 'Countess.'"

But the triumph was not always to remain hers. Trent had long since taken his revenge. It was when she was living in Long Island as Madame de Beaulieu that he had recognized her. He gained entry to her house in disguise as a paying guest, anxious to break into sporting society. When he left he had with him that hundred-carat blue-white stone known the world over as the Nizam's diamond. Since it was too big to dispose of, and he could not bear that a lapidary should cut it, the thing now reposed in a safety-deposit box at his bank with jewels of almost equal rank. He met her again with all the old, hard thoughts banished.

"What do you want?" she asked.

"Why should I send for you?" he asked. "Doesn't any reason suggest itself to you?"

"You know it was I who wrote that note, I suppose."

"I am wondering why you dare to threaten me."

"Because I thought you would never find who sent it. I hoped you would be frightened into going away at once."

"But as I am not, does your threat hold good?"

There was despair on the pale and beautiful face. "Although Trent had not guessed her motives, he saw defeat in her attitude. He knew that she would always have some strange and subtle hold upon him. No tender word had ever passed between them and yet he was conscious of this regard."

"How can I threaten one who knows so much as you?" she answered.

"Why did you write it?"

She made a gesture of despair.

"How can I tell you? You will laugh at me when you know I am content to dress like this because I want to earn my living honestly."

"I should not laugh if I believed," he said, "but to believe would not be easy. You are here for the same reason I assumed a disguise and got into your home near Old Westbury."

"No, no!" she cried, almost wildly. "It is not so, but how can I ever expect you to believe after I tricked you?" She rose to her feet. "It is I who must go. If anything is taken suspicion will fall on me. That was why I wanted to frighten you away."

"I don't yet understand," he said slowly, "but if you care to explain, you'll find me a ready listener."

"You remember that when you came to us in Westbury you found me engaged to marry Captain Monmouth. I had been, like you, one of the aristocracy of crime. I had a good deal of money and bought back for him one of the country houses which had been a seat of his family. I saw before me only a future of happiness. Well, that is finished with. He was a gambler, a spendthrift, one who kept himself by his skill with cards and his knowledge of horses. His family had disowned him; he was at death's door when I found him. When I was about to marry I confessed everything. Ah, what a stupid weakness that is to tell the man one loves everything! He would have none of me. Actually, he did not know I had stolen. He would have been content had I been a gambler like himself. But a thief! He is dead now. Somewhere he died despising me. That is my story."

Anthony Trent believed her implicitly. This was not acting a part to gain his sympathies. Surely it must be genuine contrition which could make a woman like this content to work, humble and obscure, as a teacher of French.

"Some day," she went on, "if God is good, I may feel the blessed sense of peace. One must pay for everything. But you see, I cannot stay here. I cannot stand investigation. There would be prison for me, long years of it, and when that was over there would be nothing but the old life. I dare not think of it."

He saw her difficulty. Even though she denounced him, she would herself be investigated. To get away before a robbery occurred was her only chance for safety. It was plain she assumed he had come for professional reasons and did not think any prayers of hers could dissuade him.

"There is no reason that you should leave this place if you find any happiness here," he told her. "I am here, in a sense, on business, but I have nothing to do with my former way of life."

"You cannot mean," she said slowly, "that you, who were never caught, you, who are unknown to the bureau of the police, have given it up?"

"I have," he answered, "and I shall never return to it. I know it seems difficult to credit, but it's true. I have come here to punish, not to bless. I am going to punish people who have committed wrongs you and I would never have stooped to in the old days."

"How can I help you?" she asked.

"By going on with your work here, taking no notice of me and resting assured I shall never do you harm."

He saw that the sudden ending of the strain under which she had been near to breaking down had left her devitalized and near to hysteria. There were tears in her brilliant eyes. He was profoundly touched to see her brought to such a position as this. But, he reflected, was it not better that she could cry, who had met the perils of her former calling dry-eyed and defiant?

Trent experienced a sense of relief from strain when the butler rapped upon his door and entered when bidden.

"They are dancing downstairs," said Thorpe, "and Mrs. Grant hopes you will come down."

"Directly," Trent told him.

Anthony Trent turned to Marie Dupin.

"There are many things I should like to talk about. There are better things ahead for you than living here," she smiled at her. "It is not good to dwell too much on what is done with. Grief isn't constructive. I must plan how to see you without letting Mrs. Grant suspect I know you."

"It is good to find a friend," she said simply. "I have been very unhappy. One must always pay."

He held out his hand to her. "One need not pay twice," he said. "Cheer up!"

Natica Grant had pretty manners, considerable personal charm and all that conscienceless ambition which makes up the social climber's determination to succeed. It was difficult, as Trent danced and talked with her, to realize that she had deliberately cast Sutton aside when she was convinced that he would hold her back from her goal. There was a ruthless ness about women that had always startled Trent. Here she was surrounded with luxuries bought by Sutton's money while he, for all she knew, was hourly in danger of capture. And perhaps, too, she suffered as much as Payson Grant from the dread of some sudden tragedy being thrust upon them. He decided that the perfect criminal would be a woman. Her self-possession was absolute.

Eastern Man Credited With Remarkable Pun

Though Judge Ebenezer R. Hoar's name is scarcely known outside of Massachusetts, he sat on the Supreme bench of that state, was chosen by President Grant as his first attorney general, and after the refusal of the senate—because of two honest rebuffs of senatorial intrigues—to confirm his nomination as justice of the United States Supreme court, he became the acknowledged leader of the Massachusetts bar. His wit was perhaps a little too caustic for political preference. He was one of the perpetrators of what is doubtless the most remarkable pun on record—a triple pun. This feat was performed in a conversation between the judge and his cousin, Senator William M. Evarts. The incident is related by Miss Ellen Emerson, Ralph Waldo Emerson's daughter:

Judge Hoar told me that he and Mr.

Freaks of Nature

Cetaceans are mammals whose structure is so modified as to render themselves fit for aquatic life—for instance, whales, dolphins and porpoises.

Evarts were talking together one day about a lawyer, bright, but of doubtful practices, who had lately come to some distinction. Mr. Evarts said: "Yet he seems to have been getting on lately." The judge responded: "Yes, more than that, he's been getting honor"; and Mr. Evarts instantly added: "And perhaps now he'll begin to get honest."—From the Outlook.

Use for the Mind

There is a certain use to which we might put the mind more often. We might use our minds to convince ourselves of our well-being instead of using our minds so much of the time to convince ourselves that we are in an unfortunate state. We get the idea that we are very tired—not because we are really worn out, but because we convince ourselves that we are. We rather like the martyrdom of weariness. In the mind we decide we are tired. Another attitude might convince us that we are still pretty fresh.—Grove Patterson in the Mobile Register.

We can scarcely be utterly dogmatic in such an uncertain world.

Has Heart Marked, Then Shoots Self

Ionla, Mich.—After persuading an Ionla doctor to mark its exact location, Miss Anna Moon, fifty-five years old, of Hubbardston, fired a bullet from a .38-caliber revolver into her heart here recently. Death was instantaneous.

Miss Moon, who had been a visitor at the home of Mrs. Emma Luscher six weeks, called on Dr. Raymond R. Whitten, then told him she always had a curiosity to know where her heart was, and asked him to mark the spot on her side. He did so with a piece of colored chalk.

The woman lived for years on a farm near Hubbardston. She had been in ill health for some time. She leaves a brother, John, and a sister, Mary, of Crystal.

SLASHER GIVEN SWIFT JUSTICE

Gets 180 Days for Cutting Women's Dresses.

New York—Given an example of swift justice in the local courts, Severiano Rodriguez, butcher, fifty-two years of age, whose mania for slashing dresses of women in congested places has baffled police for three months, was sentenced to 180 days in the city jail by Municipal Judge Wilson on two counts of malicious destruction of property.

Within 30 minutes from the time Deputy City Prosecutor Lindsey is sued seven complaints against Rodriguez at behest of Policemen Laquet and Mrs. Myrtle Roberts, 428 West Second street, who led to his capture during the city hall parade, the defendant was being led to a jail cell.

He later was booked on 13 additional charges of malicious mischief by Detective Lieutenant "Chitwood."

Rodriguez pleaded not guilty to six of the charges, but admitted the accusation of Mrs. Roberts. Because of the seriousness of the offense, more than 40 persons are believed to have fallen victims of Rodriguez' peculiar mania. Deputy City Prosecutor Margd requested the maximum sentence.

After imposing the maximum sentence for a misdemeanor Judge Wilson fixed bail at $6,000 and a date for trial of the other counts.

Mrs. Roberts stated she was witnessing the dedication parade when she felt a knife rip through her silk dress valued at $75. She followed the defendant for several blocks and summoned Officer Pruitt.

Others whose dresses were torn in front of the new city hall were Marie Brashear, Mrs. Theodora Webster, Mrs. Frances Vanevery, and Mrs. Marie Johnson, while Miss Millie Miller's clothing was torn on a crowded street car.

Goes to Jail for Horse, but Changes His Mind

New York.—History records the story of a fellow who, before the days of automobiles, offered his kingdom for a horse, but it remained for the present age to provide the man willing to go to jail for a horse—for half an hour.

The man is George F. Bryce, Brooklyn junk man, and the horse was Bill. George got old Bill two years ago, not in exchange for a kingdom, nor even Brooklyn, but for $12.50, and he declared in court that he had become very much attached to Bill.

It all developed this way. Bill was pulling George's junk wagon, but decided after a time to make no further progress; in fact, Bill lay right down in the street. A passing school teacher, seeing sores on the horse's back and legs, telephoned the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. It sent Special Officer Thomas Midwinter to the scene of the lying down.

When he prepared to shoot Bill to end his suffering, George objected so much that he was arrested and Bill went on living.

In court Magistrate Folwell, after hearing both sides of this animal story, gave George the option of spending $50 on a fine or 20 days in jail. George chose the 20 days, but after completing half an hour of his sentence he was ready to grant permission to shoot old Bill.

But he still protested his love for his one-time $12.50 horse.

Robber Admits Killing Two-Gun Detective

Oklahoma City.—Clyde Short, confined in the Minnesota state penitentiary on a forty-year sentence for robbery, has confessed that he and a companion murdered Luther Bishop, Oklahoma detective, at his home here in December, 1923.

A letter telling of the confession was received by J. Berry King, assistant attorney general, from J. J. Sullivan, warden of the prison at Stillwater, Minn.

Bishop, a two-gun man and one of the most fearless officers in the state, was shot to death in bed at his home. Evidence was developed that he was killed with his own pistols. His widow was charged with having slain him out of jealousy but was freed by a jury. Her attorneys contended Bishop was killed by bank robbers or other criminals whom he had been trailing.

Odd Gathering Proved Madrid Air All Right

The Association of Children of Madrid recently organized a meeting in vindication of the Madrid climate, which has been calumniated for many centuries—indeed, ever since the invention of the proverb that Madrid air is so still, yet so keen, that it will not blow out a candle but will extinguish a life.

Nearly 700 octogenarians gathered in the theater and the chair was taken by a hearty old dame aged one hundred three, who, seated at a table on the stage, now and again drew a black silk handkerchief over her head, otherwise still plentifully protected by hair just turning gray. Several speeches were made, including one by an actor ninety years old, who seemed pleased to find himself with the boards once more beneath his feet. When he had finished, a white-haired woman appeared and embraced him warmly, having enjoyed his acting half a century previously. Judging by the hearty appearance of those present, the climate, or whatever it is that prolongs life in Madrid, must be considered to be completely vindicated.—London Times.

For Lovers of the Open

Motor tourists and enthusiasts for the out-of-doors now have at their disposal, in 43 states, about 550 state parks or similar areas, with a total area exceeding 2,500,000 acres. The number is growing steadily, but the tourist who cannot find what he wants in the way of wild life or life in the wild among the parks can find numerous other reservations where he may take himself and his longing to "rough it." More than 150 state forests are open to public recreation. They contain 1,690,000 acres of "unimproved land."

Japanese Like Gold Teeth

The gold tooth craze in Japan is blamed for the present currency stringency, asserts H. Ishida of Tacoma, Wash. Whenever a Japanese gets any money ahead he buys himself a gold tooth and attempts to smile broadly all the while. The shining and fascinating fashion has resulted in large sums of gold being withdrawn from the banks in exchange for paper.

PEACE PLAN PROGRESS

Gratifying results have so far attended the plan to commit the nations to arbitration instead of war, through the negotiation of formal treaties having this end in view. The idea, first advanced by Premier Briand in behalf of such a treaty between France and the United States, was extended by Secretary of State Kellogg's suggestion of a multilateral treaty to include other nations also.

So far, fourteen nations have approved the plan in principle, including Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Japan and others, and it appears that the way is being paved for actual treaty negotiations in the near future.

Briefly stated, the idea of the treaty is that each nation shall agree not to go to war except in actual self defense when attacked, but will pledge itself to submit all differences which may arise to arbitration by a disinterested tribunal.

For the present at least, this does not mean complete disarmament, but it does mean that the signatory nations would never hastily issue ultimatums or indulge in other warlike gestures until the matter at issue can be calmly considered and if possible adjudicated by peaceful means.

The mere fact that the idea has been received with such unanimous approval by the leading powers is most encouraging. Even such a seasoned statesman and administrator as Lord Reading recently said: "I believe that once this treaty is signed, no great war can ever happen again."

Whether this optimism is fully justified or not, any plan whereby the probability of war can be lessened is worthy of the most earnest support by those upon whom the responsibility for future wars must rest.

INTERNATIONAL RADIO

Australia, Canada and the United States are now linked by beam radio over a 10,000-mile circuit between Melbourne, Montreal and New York City, the opening of the service having been the occasion for congratulatory messages between high officials of the three countries.

Between Montreal and Melbourne the new beam circuit of the Canadian Marconi Company is utilized. The cost of a message between New York City and Melbourne is 60 cents a word, a reduction of 10 cents in the former rate. This new communication system is another link in the chain of friendship which binds the United States and the nations of the British commonwealth, according to sentiments expressed by representatives of the countries concerned. In a message to Premier Butler of Australia, Secretary of State Kellogg said: "We are being brought closer together every day."

VICIOUS SPYING

By a majority of five to four, the Supreme Court of the United States decided that tapping telephone wires to obtain evidence against criminals is justifiable. The case brought about the sharpest clash between the learned judges that has occurred in a long time.

As to the propriety of using such means in obtaining evidence against real criminals there may be honest differences of opinion. But it seems that this may easily lead to abuses and to persecution of the innocent as well.

If an officer of the law may tap any citizen's telephone and listen to private conversations on mere suspicion, it would seem that practically all privacy which one is supposed to enjoy in his home has been destroyed.

The way is left open for vicious spying by busybodies and personal enemies, who happen to be officers of the law, whether any crime has been committed or not.

TELEVISION FOR ALL

Broadcasting of television programs, whereby action pictures as well as sound will entertain and instruct the radio audience, is promised for the coming fall, if present plans mature.

It is said that the manufacture of television receivers will be begun soon, and that these will be so constructed that they may be plugged into ordinary radio sets now in use. Later, if the demand warrants, a complete broadcast and television receiver will be placed on the market.

Thus it appears that the time is not far distant when one may sit at home and not only hear, but see motion pictures of performers hundreds of miles away. And this is but one of the amazing developments in applied science which are going on all around us.

SEEKS THE LIFE SPARK

Studies in biology and bio-chemistry have developed many astounding facts, many of which have been of inestimable value to mankind, but the ultimate goal of such research is to find the secret of the life spark itself, and produce it from inert matter.

That this will some day be accomplished is the belief of many distinguished scientists, although this idea is flouted by those who hold to the traditional belief in the creation of all life by special acts of a Supreme Being.

Recently Prof. William Lash Miller, internationally known bio-chemists of the University of Toronto, produced in his laboratory a component part of living matter, and his accomplishment is hailed as one of epochal importance by many fellow scientists.

Just what significance may be attached to Prof. Miller's latest discovery is somewhat difficult for a layman to judge, but it appears that it may mark a most important step toward the solution of the age-old question: What is life?

A MIXED TICKET

The presidential campaign of 1928 presents one unique feature at least. It is that of a white man running for president and a negro candidate for vice-president on the same ticket—that of the Interracial Independent Political party.

Possibly a good many of our readers have never heard of this party, but its leaders claim that fifteen million negroes are favorable to it; a ridiculous claim, of course. But many have heard of its presidential candidate who is none other than "General" Jacob S. Coxey, leader of "Coxey's Army" of 1894, composed of jobless men who marched to Washington to obtain relief, but accomplished little except to call attention to the widespread unemployment then existing. Some of them were arrested for trespassing on the Capitol grounds.

Coxey, who is now 74, operates a silica sand company in Ohio and also has oil interests in Oklahoma. The negro vice-presidential candidate is Simon P. W. Drew, a preacher and real estate operator.

Thus again it illustrates the saying that "politics makes strange bed-fellows."

COTTON SEED USE

Following closely upon the discovery of commercially valuable substances in cornstalks, corncobs and other heretofore wasted products of the farm, announcement is made by the United States Bureau of Standards that chemicals of extraordinary worth may be recovered from cotton seed hulls.

Principal among these possible products is a type of sugar called xylose, which sells for about $100 a pound, but which can be made from cotton seed hulls for a few cents a pound. These hulls also yield several hitherto rare and expensive acids, besides cellulose used as the basis of rayon, lacquers and nitro-cellulose explosives.

Thus is the laboratory discovering means for utilizing materials formerly considered of little value and converting them into products for which there is a highly remunerative market. Possibly it is to the laboratory rather than to Congress that we may eventually look for aid in solving the farm problem.

MISS EARTHART'S FLIGHT

At last a woman successfully completed an over-sea airplane flight, after three had sacrificed their lives in such an attempt and a fourth had been luckily picked up at sea after covering a major portion of the distance.

Miss Amelia Earhart, an American aviatrix, was the lucky woman, who flew from Trepassy Bay, Newfoundland, to Burryport, Wales, in the seaplane Friendship, with Wilmer Stultz as pilot and Louis Gordon as the mechanic. The continuous flight consumed 20 hours and 49 minutes, during about 19 hours of which the flyers saw neither land nor sea, but pushed through mist, fog, snow and rain until land was sighted through a rift in a cloud bank, as their hopes ran low.

President Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg cabled congratulations and Britain gave her and her companions a series of enthusiastic receptions.

It is a source of pride to her fellow countrymen that Miss Earhart is the first woman to make such a flight, and she well deserves the honors being showered upon her for her courage.

"Women are not dumb," declares a militant feminist, and most married men will agree with her.

SAN FRANCISCO IS PLANNING MANY ROAD IMPROVEMENTS

City Engineer M. M. O'Shaughnessy of San Francisco has submitted to the board of supervisors proposals of continuing roads leading into San Mateo county and affording several more outlets from San Francisco down the peninsula. Under the plan drawn up nine miles of roadway would be added to the peninsula arterial system.

Three propositions are contained in the engineers' studies:

Construction of three and one-half miles of highway to connect with the state highway near Cypress Lawn cemetery at a cost of $900,000.

Building of a connecting link with the state highway at Baden, costing $450,000.

Extension of the new roadway on to a point one and one-half miles south of San Bruno, costing $1,500,000.

According to Clyde E. Healy, assistant engineer in charge of work, only the first unit of the project will be undertaken at once, with further construction planned as the need grows.

DR. EPHRAIM NORTHCOTT PASSES AWAY IN PRISON

Dr. Ephraim Northcott, former San Mateo and San Francisco physician, convicted in 1919 of performing an illegal operation at a house on Highland avenue, in San Mateo, died last Sunday in the hospital at San Quentin. He was serving a life sentence. Death was due to pneumonia contracted at a prison camp.

The trial of the physician was one of the most sensational in the history of California, following the finding of the body of Miss Inez Reed, an army nurse, lying in Crystal Springs canyon about two miles west of San Mateo. The body remained unidentified for several days. Evidence showed that the young woman had been the victim of an operation at the Highland avenue house which was being conducted as a sanitarium. The doctor was convicted of second degree murder.

NAVAL AIRPLANES SECURED FOR LEGION CONVENTION

State Commander Phil Dodson of the American Legion has been notified by Congressman C. F. Development of Redwood City Harbor

The development of Redwood City harbor by the purchase of not less than 25 acres of land along Redwood creek, just west of the plant of the Pacific Coast Portland Cement Company, and by dredging to provide a channel for deep water ships, has been approved by the Redwood City council on recommendation of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce.

Does Own Detective Work

On his way to report the disappearance of his automobile to Redwood City police, Emile Larrouy, a Redwood City motorist, met a boy driving his car. The youth, George White, aged 16, of San Jose, smilingly admitted the theft and was lodged in jail by the owner of the car.

Will Build New Fire Station

A bid of $9,054 for the erection of a new fire department station at Redwood City has been submitted to the trustees by the Peninsula Construction Company of Redwood City, the lowest among five bidders.

Construction is to begin in about three weeks on one of the finest apartment houses in California, to be located in San Mateo. The building, which will be six stories, will cost more than $150,000.

THE INDIVIDUAL MUST REMAIN PARAMOUNT

The open secret of the greatness of America is expressed perfectly at the end of Lincoln's famous Gettysburg address: "Government of the people, by the people, for the people."

At the basis of all we have done, all our achievements and prosperity, is that definite principle of government.

In the beginning the United States was created by men to whom monarchy, the divine right of kings, all the freedom-stifling autocracy of the Europe of that time, was abominable.

They established a great country on the doctrine that the people were entitled to freedom, liberty and the right to organize their own government and society.

The iron heel of imperialism was abolished and the great experiment, Democracy, became a reality.

The qualities which had lain dormant in a subjugated people—adventurousness, vision, the urge to progress and invent and perfect—came splendidly to life. With magnificent energy and intelligence a comparative handful of citizens set themselves to the grim reality of developing a great country whose possibilities, resources, and even physical boundaries and characteristics, were but vaguely understood.

A little more than 150 years later, we are the heirs of their herculean accomplishments. All their dreams, aspirations and triumphs have been given to us.

It is our place—our duty—to see that our inheritance is carried on toward that ultimate perfection they envisaged.

The past greatness of America, the past accomplishments, came from unhampered individualism that used its intelligence and initiative for the benefit of the people as a whole, with the assistance of a government that was the true voice of the people.

The future achievements and yet unconceived greatness of America must stand on the same basis—freedom of the individual to progress and realize to the limit his possibilities. Only with that doctrine uppermost can industrial and business greatness be created and maintained.

There must be no departure from government of, by and for the people. There is no place in this country for paternalism or radicalism. The individual must remain paramount or we have failed.

SIDELIGHTS

"Every little helps" is the motto of Mrs. Mary Bisbing of Detroit, who has been awarded $5 a week temporary alimony from her third husband. She also receives $20 a week for support of a child by her first husband and government compensation for the death of her second husband, who died in service during the war.

A bodyguard furnished by Governor Al Smith did not fully protect Senator Tom Hefflin from danger on his recent visit to Syracuse. The speaker's stand collapsed and the senator was temporarily pinned down by members of the band who fell on him, but was not injured beyond a few minor bruises.

George A. Newett's recent death at Ishpeming, Michigan, at the age of 72, recalls an incident of the campaign of 1912, when he accused former President Roosevelt of drunkenness, in a story published in a newspaper. Roosevelt sued him for $100,000 for libel, but was awarded only 6 cents, which was satisfactory, as vindication only was sought.

One would hardly imagine a bowl of goldfish as constituting a fire menace, but one did in the home of F. C. Barrett of Spokane, Wash. Acting as a lens, the bowl concentrated the sun's rays on a filmy window curtain, setting it on fire.

This looks like advertising, but it is merely a reply by the Magazine Time to a subscribers' inquiry: "The most expensive U. S. made automobile is the Rolls-Royce, Lonsdale model, $19,885." We have no information concerning the size of the installments.

Those who are interested in political predictions always watch the betting odds offered in Wall Street. Just before the Republican convention the odds were 7 to 5 that Hoover would be nominated; and 8 to 1 that Smith would be the choice of the Democrats.

MAY NOW TALK WITH FRIENDS IN DENMARK

Trans-Atlantic telephone service between America and Copenhagen, the capital of Denmark, was opened Friday, June 29, according to the announcement by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. The hours of operation will be from 2:30 a. m. to 6 p. m., Pacific Standard time, which corresponds to 12:30 p. m. in Denmark.

Copenhagen, with a population estimated at 775,000, has a total of approximately 126,000 telephones. Denmark is the seventh European country to be connected with America by telephone. The service in Europe includes all points in Great Britain and Germany, Paris and all the important cities in Belgium, Holland and Sweden.

IMPRESSIVE GAINS BY BANK OF ITALY

In a statement which reflects the most impressive gains ever experienced in any previous six months period, the Bank of Italy has published its report of condition for the first half of 1928.

Resources have grown more than $804,000,000; deposits have jumped to $666,000,000; the cash position shows a liquidity greater than at any time in the history of the institution, and the combined profits of the bank, National Bankitalia Company and their subsidiaries have reached a new high level for a half year's operation at $11,127,676.14.

"The report of condition is one in which the stockholders of our institution may take justifiable pride," said James A. Bacigalupi, president of the bank, in commenting on the statement. "The gain in resources is even more generous than had been anticipated and marks the first time that the totals have gone beyond $800,000,000."

Analysis of the published statement shows that in addition to the large gains in deposits, the bank has increased its letter of credit and acceptance account to more than $24,000,000. The enlarged volume of international business, as well as extensive operation in the field of foreign travel, to which the Bank of Italy has devoted itself, is clearly shown in the current figures.

The bond investment amounting to $230,000,000 (of which amount $158,000,000 is represented by U. S. Liberty bonds and other government securities) together with $103,000,000 actual cash on hand in banks, gives the institution a liquidity of more than 50 per cent. At the same time, further additions to the capital accounts continue to insure for the institution its established leadership among the world's financial institutions.

Evidence of the widespread public patronage which the bank enjoys is revealed by the increase in the number of its depositors, the figures showing 1,347,357, or a gain of 57,000 during the past six months.

FIRES HURT ALL BUSINESSES

"In the present economic scheme of things," says the Modern Fire Chief, "we live in a very closely-knit and interrelated world. Co-operation is the basis of our economic order, which is affected and regulated by a very intricate system of exchange. Each of us can enjoy success in the long run, only as long as the whole system of things prospers. Because of this co-operative interdependence any waste of labor or capital affects each of us."

"Knowing this to be true, why do we Americans so complacently regard our annual fire loss as a matter of course—something that only affects those who suffer a fire? What a fallacy it is to believe that the effects of a fire are limited to the factory or building or the home that is destroyed.

"What happens when an industrial plant burns? Production ceases, and when work stops, men naturally are thrown out of work. When work ceases, salaries and wages cease. Perhaps it soon becomes necessary to draw out of savings accounts and the like. Only the absolute necessities of life are purchased. The buying power of the people is lessened."

The public should realize that our tremendous annual direct fire loss of nearly $600,000,000 is but a small part of the inestimable loss from fire in the United States. The indirect loss in wages, business, time and employment is a great additional burden that must be borne by all of us, and which is not "insured."

PAVED STREETS SAVE MONEY

Highland, Illinois, a city of 3,000 population, this spring embarked on a program to pave thirteen or fourteen miles of its streets. According to the mayor this will actually save the municipality money, because of the tremendous upkeep cost of the dirt roads. In the last eleven years their maintenance has cost $180,000.

It has been the repeated experience of cities and towns of all sizes that money spent for hard-surfacing dirt streets, or salvaging worn-out paved ones, is not an expense. On the contrary it is an economy and a dividend-paying investment.

In our modern life good roads and streets are as necessary as telephones and electricity.

President Coolidge is only 56, and he hasn't said he does not choose to run in 1932.

So there is to be a third party this year, after all. It is composed principally of Senator Norris.

INDEPENDENCE

IN 1876, one hundred years after the signing of the Declaration of Independence, the first telephone circuit was installed on the Pacific Coast. This marked the beginning of a new freedom—freedom from the bonds of distance.

For today, distance is not a barrier to the transmission of thought by speech. The last half century has seen the development of the telephone from small beginnings to a vast network of voice highways extending throughout the length and breadth of the nation.

From your own telephone you are within speaking distance of over 70,000 cities and towns throughout the United States and many points in Mexico, Canada and Europe.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

California's total estimated daily average crude oil production increased 3,500 barrels during the week ended June 23, it was officially reported by the American Petroleum Institute. The total estimated daily average crude oil production for the week of the report was 645,500 barrels as compared with 642,000 barrels for the week ended June 16.

By way of affording the taxpayers something cheerful to think about, the California Tax Commission announces that it doesn't intend to increase state government revenues. Just what the commission does intend to urge hasn't been revealed as yet, but fears of a year ago that new income would be necessary apparently have been set at rest, at least for the present. "The commission," says Chairman Irving Martin of Stockton, "is not proceeding on the theory that the state needs a lot more revenue."

Urging upon California the need for voting next November the $6,500,000 state park bond issue provided for by the 1927 legislature, conservationists of national repute spoke at San Francisco recently at the 8th national conference on state parks. "This year's conference was held in California for the direct purpose of helping pass the state park bond issue," said Chairman Mather. "The beauties of a state are wasted unless they are made available for the people of the state and its visitors."

With the California highway budget for the 1929-30 biennium now being drafted by the state division of highways, Bert B. Meek, state director of public works, announced that road improvement will proceed along much the same lines as during the present two-year period. It is estimated that the state's highway income for the forthcoming biennium will total between $50,000,000 and $55,000,000. The director disclosed that it is his desire to have right-of-ways on the two main north-south routes and important laterals of the state brought up to a maximum right-of-way width of 100 feet.

California's 1929 auto license plate will be bigger, heavier, and in colors of deep yellow and dull black. They will have three times the visibility of the present gold and blue plates and will be modeled after the present New York auto plate style. The letters of the alphabet are to be used so that the first plate number reads 1-A-1. The plates then will run to 9-A-9999, which will give the division of motor vehicles a run of 90,000 numbers. The lettering then changes and the first of the next series will be 1-B-1 and so on through the alphabet to 9-Z-9999. The letters I, O and Q will be eliminated, due to similarity to numerals.

Earthquake movements in California earthquake regions will soon be accurately measured. A surveying party engaged in measuring Mt. Whitney has passed the 10,360-foot level, according to the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and will reach the summit next month. Metal tablets set in rock at frequent intervals along the line of levels, giving the elevation, will now furnish a basis for detecting the direction and amount of change in elevation in case of earthquakes in that region. The present leveling is part of a five-year Coast and Geodetic Survey study of California earthquake regions.

First steps toward acquisition of the Calaveras and South Calaveras big tree groves as state park lands were accomplished a few days ago with the announcement that part of the territory will ultimately be donated by the federal government. The Calaveras big tree association, announced Fred Stevenson, state director of natural resources, has urged the state park commission to consider purchase of approximately 9,000 acres privately owned in the groves. A bill sponsored in Congress by Senator Hiram W. Johnson and Congressman Harry L. Englebright he added, allows federal contribution of 1,100 acres additionally if the groves are adopted as a state park during the next six years.

From Oregon to the Mexican line the 300 and more posts of the American Legion of California will observe with fitting ceremony the nation's 152nd birthday, July 4. The World War veterans of Tuolumne County are planning to conduct a union meeting at Malone Lake, where Lieutenant Governor Buron R. Fitts will be the speaker. At Santa Barbara John R. Quinn, former national commander of the legion, will be the speaker of the day. Department Commander Phil Dodson will fill several engagements in the south, while State Adjutant General James K. Fisk is to speak at Oakland's airport. At Banning the legionnaires will dedicate the local airport made possible by their own efforts.

Feeding Young Pigs

Providing a separate place to eat as early in the life of the pigs as possible is the basis of natural weaning or, if it must be hastened, of a forced weaning that does not stunt the pigs. This separate feeding place need not be elaborate or expensive. If the sows and their litters are being fed in a central hog house, a pen or two in the house or a portion of the yard can be made into a pig feeder, easily. Clean ground raising requires a specially built creep.

CUYLER NOT HARD TO TRAVEL WITH

Owner Wrigley Looks to Kiki for Needed Punch.

Hazen ("Kiki") Cuyler, bench warmer and bad boy of the Pirates, is going great guns with the Chicago Cubs. Owner William Wrigley and Manager Joe McCarthy look to this slender, fleet-footed brunette of twenty-nine for the punch to put them across ahead of the field in the National league pennant chase.

"That Kiki Cuyler is some boy, some boy," said Wrigley. "Hit? You bet he can. Hard to get along with? I never saw a more amiable player. He is fighting for the Cubs all the time. He is helping the rookies and he is going to give us the pennant this year, or I miss my guess by a mile."

Kiki has been in professional baseball only eight years, but in that time he has experienced the sorrows and joys that many of the game's oldest veterans never realize. He has been sent back to the "farm" three times after a major league start; he has hit his way to land among that small coterie of the game's best sluggers, he has been benched for insubordination and has been traded down the river.

Last season Cuyler was benched by the Pirates when he had a fuss with Donie Bush and Barney Dreyfuss.

While many critics, including John McGraw of the Giants, believed Kiki was through, that his batting weakness had been discovered and that being hit by a pitched ball had made him shy, he has made good with the Cubs in startling fashion and seemingly rejuvenated them.

Most Peculiar Home Runs

Made by Oklahoma Player

One of the most peculiar home runs ever made came in a game between Salina, Kan., and Bartlesville, Okla., a few years ago. Bartlesville had a big 6-foot 7-inch fielder named Murphy. The game was halted by rain in the fifth inning and the grass was wet when play was resumed. One of the Salina players hit a rolling drive into left. It shouldn't have been good for more than a double. The tall Murphy chased the ball to the fence, stooped down and picked it up, straightened up to his full height to make the throw-in.

He was very close to the fence at the time and he was so tall that his hand, when he drew back to throw, was above the edge of the fence. The ball was wet from rolling through the grass and it slipped out of Murphy's fingers as he tried to throw and dropped over the fence for a homer.

Mike Cleary and Denny Kelliher Hard Hitters

Jim Corbett was once asked whom he regarded as the hardest hitter he ever faced, Fitzsimmons, Chynski, Jeffries or Jackson, and Corbett replied:

"He claims the hardest hitters of all time were Mike Cleary and Denny Kelliher."

Few people have ever heard of either man but Corbett says Cleary was the hardest natural hitter that ever crashed a fist against an opponent.

Kelliher, he says, could knock a man stiff with a three-inch punch.

"They could make all the other hitters in boxing look like powder puffs," added Corbett.

Goslin Picks Pipgras as Best in American League

"Goose" Goslin, the slugging outfielder of the Senators, says "Big George" Pipgras of the Yankees is the best pitcher in the American league.

"That boy Pipgras," declared Goslin, "is the best pitcher in the league and should have a big year with the Yankees. He throws a fast one that is really fast and almost impossible to hit. His fast ball sails and you can't get a good hold of it. At the end of last season he was almost unbeatable."

CANDIED FRUITS

To the one who loves fruit, and color, the luscious boxes and baskets of candied fruits which are in the markets so plentifully in the southern states, are most appealing. The price has always been so prohibitory that the large majority have not felt able to afford to buy. But now that we learn how to prepare these fruits in our own homes, and many are doing it, the prices are gradually lowering.

The fruits of any particular locality may be candied as well as the fruits of the South. Kumquats, loquats, pineapples, apricots, prunes and oranges as well as grapefruit. Cherries are grown in all parts of the country and are especially nice when candied.

For the large fruits, peel and core and cut into halves. Puncture the smaller fruits in several places with a wooden toothpick. Cook all the fresh fruits in water, but see that they are kept unbroken. This water may be used to make further sirup.

Prepare at least twice as much sirup as fruit to thoroughly cover. To one cupful of light corn sirup add two cupfuls of water, bring to a boil and pour over the fruit. Cover with a plate if the fruit floats. Allow this to stand twenty-four hours. Then pour off this sirup, measure it and to every four cupfuls add one-half cupful of sugar. Bring to the boiling point to dissolve the sugar and pour back over the fruit. Allow to stand twenty-four hours, drain again, measure and add to every four cupfuls one-half cupful of sugar, boil and pour over the fruit. Stand twenty-four hours, repeat this process, adding the half cupful of sugar each time for six times with an interval of twenty-four hours between each, until the sirup is thick like honey. Let the fruit remain in this sirup a week in a cool place. Drain and place on wire screen where the air may circulate around it and protect from flies. Pack when it is not sticky in waxed paper lined baskets or boxes. Cover and put away in a cool place.

The pits and stones are removed from such fruits as cherries, prunes and apricots before the candying process is begun.

Measure the fruit in a crockery dish large enough to hold it and the sirup to cover it.

Foundation Cake.

With a foundation recipe for cake to use as a base, one may vary the recipe and have a dozen varieties.

Cake No. 1.—Take one-fourth cupful of shortening, one cupful of sugar, two eggs, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-half cupful of milk and one teaspoonful of lemon or vanilla extract. Cream the shortening, add the sugar and mix well, then the well-beaten eggs, the flour sifted with the baking powder and salt added alternately with the milk, beating well, add flavoring and pour into greased pan.

Cake No. 2.—Take three-fourths of a cupful of shortening, one and three-fourths cupfuls of sugar, four eggs, two cupfuls of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of milk and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Mix as No. 1, except the eggs; the whites and yolks are beaten separately and the whites are folded in at the last.

For a nut cake add one cupful of finely broken nut meats to the batter just before putting into the pans.

For raisin cake add one-half to three-fourths cupfuls of raisins to the batter—four times first.

For chocolate, add two squares of melted chocolate to the batter with one tablespoonful more of milk.

If a marble cake is desired, divide the batter and stir in the chocolate batter when in the pan; put it in alternate layers with the white.

For cup cakes, bake in gem pans in a hot oven.

For sheet cake, bake in a shallow pan in a hot oven.

For layer cake bake in layers in a hot oven and use any desired filling.

Butter Frosting.—Take one-third of a cupful of butter, add one and one-half cupfuls of confectioner's sugar gradually, blending well; add one-half teaspoonful of flavoring and one tablespoonful of milk. Spread on the top and sides of the cake.

Boiled Frosting.—Take one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of water, one egg white and one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Beat the egg white stiff, cook the sugar and water until honey-like, then add two or three tablespoonfuls to the egg white, beating well. Return the sirup to the heat and boil to the hair stage, dip a fork into it, and if it hairs remove and pour over the egg; beat until cool, add the flavoring. If frosting becomes too hard add a tablespoonful of boiling water, half a teaspoonful at a time.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

BOBBIE'S THREE FRIENDS

One night, after Bobbie had been playing in the barn all day, he went to sleep very quickly.

He went to sleep so quickly that he had not had time to say, as he usually did:

"Please, Mr. Dream King, send me nice dreams."

If he did not feel so dreadfully sleepy he would make his little speech longer and would say:

"Your gracious Majesty, Mr. Dream King, will your royal highness do a poor, humble subject like myself, the great and noble and wondrous honor of sending me most royal and noble and wondrous dreams?"

This evening all he said was:

"Nice dreams, please."

"Soon, oh, so soon, it seemed as though he saw his three horse friends, Danny and Fanny and Prince walking into his room."

And then they all stood at the end of the bed, all in a row.

"Hello, Bobbie," they said.

"Hello Danny and Fanny and Prince," said Bobbie.

"We've come to tell you something," said Fanny.

"Hello, Bobbie," They Said.

"It's something you've always wanted to know," said Danny.

"Because I'm the oldest horse, they've given me the honor of telling it to you," added Prince.

Then the three horses neighed, looked at each other, smiled their horse smiles and then looked at Bobbie.

"You've always wanted to know why we put our ears straight up when you come around," said Prince.

"Oh yes," said Bobbie, "I've always wanted to know if there was any special reason for it."

"There is," said Prince, "and I will tell it to you."

"When we put our ears up it's to tell you we're feeling pleasant and friendly."

"When horses put their ears way back it means they're cross, and perhaps they'll bite."

"But we have never put our ears back on our heads when you've been around, Bobbie, so it means we always, always like to have you with us."

And the next morning when Bobbie got up he went out to his three friends and kissed them, and said:

"I know a secret of yours."

An Easy Coin Trick

Place three coins in a row across the table. Next pick them up, and as you do so, count, "one, two, three."

Next put two of your coins down, counting "four, five." Then pick the two up again, counting "six, seven" as you do so.

The next thing you do is to place the three coins down, in a row across the table, but lower down, and count "eight, nine, ten" as you do this.

Now this all seems simple enough, but when others are asked to repeat your actions exactly, they will find it very difficult. The trick lies in the start. Your friend will probably begin to count as he places the first three coins down on the table, saying "one, two, three," and that will make him come out with "eleven, twelve, thirteen" instead of "eight, nine, ten" at the finish. Therefore you must remember to lay the three coins down first and not begin counting until you begin picking them up.—Grit.

Hunt Singing Earthworms

If you want to go out and watch the ways of the singing earthworms that have figured in the news of late, take a red lantern with you. Earthworms can't see red light, asserted W. R. Walton of the bureau of entomology, United States Department of Agriculture. Mr. Walton has been trying the effects of various colors of light on these unorthodox, but effective-trout baits. They are very sensitive to blue light and other parts of the upper end of the spectrum, but when red light is turned on them they continue their work of dragging food into their burrows, quite as though they were still concealed by their congenial darkness.

"But you know, dear, that dreams always mean the opposite."

INSANITY AS DEFENSE IN CRIMINAL CASES

The focusing of public attention upon insanity as a defense in criminal cases through the notorious failure of justice in the case of George Remus, the Ohio lawyer and bootlegger, who murdered his wife, interposed a plea of insanity, conducted his own defense and secured an acquittal, together with the situation in California growing out of the changes in the law here with regard to insanity as a defense for crime, has prompted the State Bar of California to assign as a topic to be studied by its sections, the subject of Legal Insanity.

The necessity for this study has been further evidenced in the recent case of one Robert Perry, gun man, "two time loser" and criminal minded person, who, despite the fact that he had been heretofore convicted of robbery with violence, upon his plea of not guilty to the offense charged, was by the same jury set free upon the trial of his plea of "not guilty by reason of insanity."

The validity of the present law with its provisions for a double plea of not guilty and not guilty by reason of insanity, is at present before the Supreme Court in the Hickman and other cases. If the law is sustained, all well and good; but that will not alter the fact that California must continue to endeavor to work out a more logical method of dealing with the problem of insanity and its use as a defense in criminal cases.

Studies of this problem have developed the fact that Massachusetts has a law providing for a pre-examination by the Department of Mental Diseases of all persons charged with capital offenses, or who have been previously convicted of felonies.

The National Crime Commission in a report on the mental aspect of crime refers favorably to this law and points out that, since its enactment in 1921, there has been an average of less than one case a year in which alienists have been employed by the defense in trials.

It is a well known fact that insanity as a defense is resorted to in cases of an abhorrent or notorious character, such as the Hickman case; that medical men, not alienists, can be qualified as experts to testify as to the defendant's mental condition; that these medical men may be employed for a fee, usually large, and may give testimony designed to support the case of the person employing them.

As a result of studies made, the conclusion has been reached by the San Francisco subsection of the State Bar on legal insanity that insanity is not a proper question for a lay jury, but it is one that should be passed upon by the judge, aided by a board of qualified alienists.

To that end it has been suggested that preinvestigation of criminals in capital cases is desirable and that if, following such examination and report, the defense desires to interpose a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity, experts to testify at the trial shall be chosen from a list of qualified experts in mental disease certified by the State Medical Society, three names to be suggested by the defense, three to be suggested by the prosecution, the judge to appoint one from those suggested by each side and then to appoint another alienist whose name has not been suggested by either side as the third, these experts to be paid by the state and prohibited from accepting any fee or emolument other than that paid them by the state.

In this manner it is hoped to secure much more credible testimony in cases involving insanity as a defense, and preventing such lamentable miscarriage of justice as in the Remus case in Ohio and the Perry case in San Francisco.

The feature picture at the State Theatre this Saturday evening will be Vera Reynolds and Charles Delaney in "The Main Event."

NEW LICENSE PLATES YELLOW AND BLACK

License plates for 1929 that are bigger, heavier and in colors of deep yellow and dull black and that supply almost three times as much visibility will replace the smaller gold and blue plates of 1928. This is the announcement of Alexander R. Heron, state director of finance.

Heron also announced a radical change in the system of numbering that will eliminate the use of seven-character plates. The new plates were designed to reduce the chances for the hit and run drivers and others of his type making a speedy getaway, providing as they do a much easier means of identifying him.

The new plate was patterned largely after that in use in New York state, after an exhaustive survey of all the plates used in the United States. It will be issued without any additional charge to the motoring public. State officials expect that at least 2,000,000 pairs will be required.

The new plate, Heron explained, will be manufactured of 24-gauge steel and will weigh about twice as much as the 1928 plate. An inverted bead will give it a very rigid edge, eliminating the use of plate frames or holders.

It will be 14 inches in length and 6 1/4 inches wide. Script letters and numerals will replace the block letters used on this year's plate, because of their greater visibility. The background will be dull black, while letters and numerals will be deep yellow.

The letters of the alphabet are used so that the first plate is 1A1. They then run to 9A9999, which will give the division of motor vehicles a run of 90,000 numbers. The letter then shifts and the first of the new series is 1B1 and so on through the alphabet to 9Z9999.

AIRPLANE FOREST PATROL UNDER WAY

Airplane patrol of the national forests of California, again made possible by a special appropriation by Congress, began on July 1, according to report from the United States Forest Service headquarters in San Francisco. Planes will be used this year only for reconnaissance of forested areas following heavy thunder and lightning storms and during periods of smoke and fog when the visibility from ground outlooks is poor; for aerial survey of going fires, and for the emergency transportation of men and fire fighting supplies and equipment to large conflagrations. No regular patrol of the national forests, along given courses, will be maintained.

Planes of the Air Service, U. S. Army, used in former years by the Forest Service for patrol duty on the Pacific Coast, will no longer be available for this work, according to a decision of the war department, which states that the army is unable to again co-operate because of the shortage of planes.

Forest airplane patrol this season will be handled throughout Northern California by the Pacific Coast Air Service Company of Oakland, and in Southern California by the Western Air Express of Los Angeles. These companies were the successful bidders for the work and will handle the patrol under Forest Service contract.

The Pacific Coast Air Service will operate from the Oakland airport and has agreed to furnish the Forest Service with a Waterhouse-Romain two passenger biplane and a Fairchild five passenger monoplane for use as a reserve ship. The Western Air Express will operate a Douglas biplane, similar to the ships now used on the Los Angeles-Salt Lake air-mail run, from Vail field, Los Angeles.

For the safety of air patrol pilots and observers flying over forested areas where there are no regular landing fields, the Forest Service is improving and marking thirty-five emergency fields within the national forests of the state.

Airplane patrol for the national forests of Oregon, Washington, Western Montana and Northern Idaho will be contracted for by the Forest Service headquarters at Portland, Ore., and Missoula, Mont., respectively.

MECHANICAL PERFECTION INCREASES EARNING POWER

The purchasing power of the dollar is at present higher than it has been for nearly five years, as measured by the average living cost of the American wage earner, according to the National Industrial Conference Board. Its lowest point was in July, 1920. The post-war deflation has been steadily remedied and living costs today are the least they have been since June, 1923.

This is a sure sign of prosperity. Mechanical perfection and increase of efficiency in industry has benefited the worker in two ways: It has increased his wage-earning power and decreased the price of the commodities he must buy. It is estimated that today the purchasing power of an industrial worker's weekly pay is 35 per cent higher than at the outbreak of the World war.

Celebrating her one hundred and fourth birthday anniversary, Mrs. Anna Sanders, of New York City, assisted her friend, Mrs. Julia Thomas, aged 70, with ironing, by which they earn their living.

Suing for divorce, Mrs. Ellen Guenther, of Chicago, testified that she had been poisoned by fishhooks her husband put in his pocket where he carried his money.

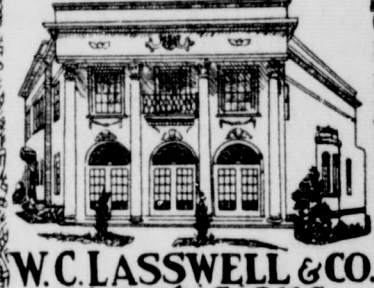

GIVE THE ARSONIST HIS OWN MEDICINE

The elimination of arson would mark a great reduction in the nation's fire insurance bill. This abhorrent crime is a paramount destroyer of life and property and its cost must be defrayed by every holder of an insurance policy.

Sometime ago a Delaware man, convicted of arson, was sentenced to a whipping as well as a long prison term. There are those who consider this penalty barbarous. But the arsonist is an uncivilized and barbarous being who must be fed on his own medicine. It but makes the punishment fit the crime.

If corporal punishment will discourage arson, it should by all means be adopted.
